

It is also best to travel with non-aerosol containers.

NOTE: it is best to avoid using perfumes or aftershaves as the scent tends to attract biting flies and mosquitoes.

Small calculator and card with current exchange rate

You can call your bank before you leave - or there are several good websites. My favorite is www.oanda.com/convert/cheatsheet
If you don't bring one DO NOT drive me crazy at the shops asking me for conversions!!!! 😊

Flashlight or miners lamp (with new batteries) REQUIRED!!!!!!!!

Plan on having it ON YOU at all times when in Africa, even the big hotels. We are so use to things "working" that we don't realize that Africa's infrastructure is not like ours. Lights frequently go out. I find having a flashlight in a pouch on my belt works perfectly.

You will need these to get from the dining area to your tent at night. The Asakari have them (guards) but their job is not to light your path, but rather to look for anything that might be in the grass. BRING YOUR OWN!!

Be sure to leave by your bed at night if we are in a camp where the generator is turned off.

Travel Pillow

For plane if you want.

Elastic stockings

to help with swollen legs on plane, if so desire.

Extra small tote or other bag

To bring back "goodies" . Travel stores sell collapsible zip down duffle bags that we find very handy.

Electrical adapter

Plug ins vary sometimes between countries and even between hotels and camps. I don't want to tell you to bring one thing and have it not be what you need. I recommend getting the sets that have several different plugs in them to be sure you have one that works. Safari Legacy recommends The British 3 square pin but we usually just bring a "kit" that has several.

Camera equipment

2 (if possible) 35 mm camera bodies. Zoom lens/s. Film, batteries, cleaning stuff, battery chargers.
